COVID-19 Q & A of the Day

Question: Does SARS-CoV-2 (the virus that causes COVID-19) affect a person's sense of smell and taste?

Answer: A temporary loss of smell and taste have been linked to people who have COVID-19 and was recently added to a checklist of symptoms for the disease. Based on a study that was published in Science Daily, "if you have smell and taste loss, you are more than 10 times more likely to have COVID-19 infection than other causes of infection." It is not, however, a universal feature of SARS-CoV-2 infection.
