

HIGH RISK LEVEL

What does it mean, and what can you do?

As Idaho's efforts to slow the spread of COVID-19 transitions from a statewide response to a regional response, Eastern Idaho Public Health has developed a series of risk levels. Returning to a lower risk level won't be instant, like flipping a switch, it'll be more like gradually moving a dial.

Continue to follow the practices below to keep the dial moving back toward a lower risk level and prevent it from escalating.

High-risk individuals should operate under stricter instructions because they are more likely to suffer severe illness from COVID-19.

Order for mandatory face coverings when in public and physical distance can't be maintained

Limit events and social gatherings to no more than 50 people

Telework for those who are able; consider industry-specific measures

Hospitals suspend scheduled, non-essential surgeries

Businesses implement delivery/curbside services as much as possible

Discontinue sports/activities in which physical distancing is not possible

Limiting travel/visitors to the region, as well as travel to areas within the state experiencing high rates of spread

Vulnerable populations encouraged to self-isolate. Congregate living facilities close to visitors, take extra precautions

Schools should implement strategies in response to these guidelines and those of Back to School Framework 2020
